ANTI-SHOCK PROTECTION

A special circuitry inside the player prevents disc skipping when the player is subject to shock and shaking during music playback. The laser scans the CD/MP3 disc and saves data for up to 1/10th of a second ahead of where the playback actually is on the disc. In case of shaking or shocking vibrations, the player reads from the saved memory until the laser can read the CD again.

Too much vibration or shaking may cause the player to malfunction and cause skipping to be heard. If this happens, place the player on a solid, level vibration resistant surface.
